Learning the A-Bee-Cs On Walk around the Lake

by Kristin Fletcher

On a Saturday in June, pollinator enthusiasts of all ages enjoyed a talk and walk around the lake at Buddy Attick Park to learn about native bees and the importance of bee habitat conservation. The event was sponsored by the Butterfly Brigade, a local group, and led by Greenbelt biologist Jason Martin.

Martin has volunteered at the U.S. Geological Survey native bee lab, catching and identifying some of the native species found in Maryland. He has also worked on environmental restoration projects in meadows, wetlands and riparian forests.

In Buddy Attick Park, two areas are specifically designed to attract bees and other pollinators. The first plot, located near the group picnic area down the hill from the main entrance, was designed by former Public Works assistant director and horticulturist Lesley Riddle. Recognizable by its many brightly colored wildflowers, the plant varieties in this area, Martin explained, were chosen to ensure blooming throughout the season in a

City Council Tackles Advisory Board and Committee Issues

by Thomas X. White

All members of the Greenbelt City Council were on hand at an August 20 worksession covering three recent issues raised dealing with the city's advisory boards and committees. Council decided to cover all of them at this one worksession.

The first item was a request made at a council meeting on April 28 by George Boyce of Club125 (now MakerSpace) located in Roosevelt Center. He requested that the council establish a Science & Technology (S&T) Advisory Committee to advise the city on S&T and related issues.

Michael Hartman made the second request in November 2013 to establish a city Advisory Group on Inclusion and Diversity. Such a group would include among its members minorities, women, individuals with disabilities, veterans and individuals from the lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender community. The focus of the committee would be directed to city employment and service issues.

The third issue related to a request made this year at the July 14 council meeting by Robert Snyder, chair of the city's Forest Preserve Advisory Board, that the city provide stricter prohibitions on members of city boards in discussing personal information of other board members with outside sources without the board's permission. In addition, city staff had already been working on a draft document relating to a Code of Conduct for city advisory board and committee members.

On all of these issues there was lively discussion among and between members of council and members of the audience.

Science & Technology

Although notice had been sent to Club125 representatives, no one from that organization appeared to participate in the discussion. Mayor Emmett Jordan introduced the topic. In his summary comment he said that the proposal needs additional thought regarding the scope of the proposed committee and the issues that it would address.

Councilmember Leta Mach suggested at the outset that the proposal be referred to the city's existing Advisory Committee on Education (ACE). She felt that the scope of issues covered by ACE includes the S&T topics as they relate to education. ACE has addressed S&T programs at Eleanor Roosevelt High School and has considered the technical programs of federal agencies located in Greenbelt.

Councilmember Judith Davis agreed, noting her concern about the addition of two more advisory committees to the city's list. She asked how much more can we ask the city to do?

Jordan added that he would prefer having a task force address issues related to S&T.

Councilmember Konrad Herling opined that Boyce was likely frustrated with the lack of attention directed to the topic within Greenbelt. Herling said he wanted the city to go beyond the status quo.

Councilmember Ed Putens

agreed that the S&T topic does go beyond education and could be more related to activities of the federal agencies and economic development.

From the audience, Lore Rosenthal noted that the city has a reputation for outstanding programs relating to the arts and recreation but does not offer much in the area of S&T. She suggested a kids camp for S&T. Susan Stewart supported the task force approach.

At the conclusion of the discussion, council opted to refer the Club125 request to ACE and await the results of the Economic Development Study that is underway before making a decision.

Diversity

Hartman, who made the 2013 request to council to create an Advisory Committee on Diversity and Inclusion, presented at the meeting a fuller discussion of his proposal. He distributed a three page document defining the scope of the proposed advisory committee and a broad description of how he envisioned the committee would serve the city as a technical resource in the areas of human resources and delivery of city services to the diverse social and geographic sections of the city.

Greenbelt Charges On With Electric Vehicles

by Jane Young and John Lippert

The Green Transportation Rally entered the Labor Day Parade for the first time in 2003, solely with hybrid electric vehicles. Since then, hybrids have become common here in Greenbelt. This year, we had five plug-in electric cars. Plug In America expected that by the Labor Day holiday 250,000 electric vehicles will have been sold in the U.S. since 2010. More than half a million have been sold worldwide in the past three years. One of the vehicles in the parade was

Hummingbirds

Jewelweed is in flower at this writing, September 4. In late summer, jewelweed is an important plant for butterflies, bees and hummingbirds. A profusion of orange flowers provide nectar for many species with winter approaching. Today, there were three or four hummingbirds chasing each other and feeding. There are at least two good places to watch hummingbirds in Old Greenbelt. The largest stand is next to the beautiful foot bridge over the creek downstream from Greenhill Road, not far from Laurel Hill Road. You can stand on the bridge, be quiet and still; you may be rewarded with action. Sometimes one will hover right in front of your face; they are feisty and curious. The other place I have seen them is on the jewelweed growing on top of the beaver dam near the lake. Jewelweed prefers moisture, the reason we see it around streams and lakes.

Beltway Plaza Hosts Pre-Blues Festival

Can't wait to hear the terrific music at Greenbelt's 12th annual Blues Festival on Saturday, September 13? Then come to Beltway Plaza Mall on Friday, September 12 from 6 to 8 p.m. to hear Kevin Robinson's magical guitar kick off the weekend of music. Robinson will be performing at the corridor hub intersection by the entrance to Academy 8 Stadium Theaters.

Beltway Plaza, a key sponsor of the Greenbelt Blues Festival for the second year in a row, will be hosting this kick-off event. Their sponsorship enabled Friends of New Deal Café Arts (FONDCA) to expand this year's advertising and festival promotions, increase support for the region's top blues bands and ensure the 12th annual Greenbelt Blues Festival will be an event not to be missed. In addition to sponsoring the Blues Festival, Beltway Plaza will be hosting other events in celebration of the mall's 50th anniversary in Greenbelt.

Other sponsors for this year's festival include Greenbelt Station-NVHomes-Ryan Homes; Friends of New Deal Café Arts (FONDCA) and the following Roosevelt Center Merchants: Greenbelt Auto & Truck Repair, Greenbelt Co-op Supermarket & Pharmacy, Greenbelt Federal Credit Union and the Law Offices of David Cross. The Blues Festival is produced by the New Deal Café with support from the City of Greenbelt.

GSA to Scope Potential Issues for Each FBI Site

The General Services Administration (GSA) will be preparing an Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) for the acquisition of a new Consolidated Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) headquarters, including each of the three potential sites of Greenbelt, Landover and Springfield, Va.

In preparing the EIS, GSA will be scoping any potential historic preservation impacts through a series of open houses and consultations with the District of Columbia Historic Preservation Office, the Virginia Department of Historic Resources and the Maryland Historic Trust.

The open house scheduled for the Greenbelt site will be held on Tuesday, September 23 from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the Greenbelt Library. The Springfield site open house will be held at the Robert E. Lee High School and the Landover (Hyattsville) site open house will be held on October 2 in the Sports and Learning Complex. A fourth open house will focus on the current FBI headquarters in the District and will be held there on October 1.

Visitors may drop in at any point during the meetings to learn about the project and provide comments. Scoping is an early and open public involvement process aimed at determining the scope of issues to be addressed in the EIS. Written comments must be submitted or postmarked by October 23: U.S. GSA – NCR, Office of Planning and Design Quality, Attn.: Nia Francis, 301 7th Street, SW, Room 4004, Washington, D.C. 20407.

technique called plant succession, an important consideration for planning one's own pollinator-friendly garden.

Also important is to include both shallow (coreopsis) and deep (lily) flowers. Why? Because there are both short- and long-tongued bees. A bumblebee, for example, has a long tongue, called a proboscis, and those long tongues need a deep flower to reach into to get the nectar.

Some native bee genera, the group observed at work in this garden that were identified by Martin, included Halictus, Lasioglossum, Agapostemon, Apis (Honeybee) and Bumble. There were also many leather-winged beetles, which are good to have around because they are carnivorous and eat aphids, a type of mite that infects plants.

Native Bees

The group was surprised to learn that there are more than 400 species of native bees in Maryland, with 250 in Prince George's County alone. Many are very small and closely resemble a fly. How can one tell the difference? Flies have one pair of wings instead of two, and red eyes.

Different species of native bees have different social structures, from highly social (honeybees), to solitary, to something in between.

Bee nests also vary in type from species to species, and about 75 percent of native bees, mostly the solitary ones, nest in the ground in small holes. Sandy soil is especially good for this purpose. Looking closely, one can probably find some of these nesting holes in one's yard.

Martin explained that bees who live in these holes don't have to worry about flooding when it rains. They line their nesting cavities with a substance secreted from their Dufour's gland, which creates a waterproof coating.

And speaking of yards, a ground cover alternative to grass that bees love is clover, which used to be more widespread as a cover crop in agriculture.

As we walked along the lake path to the second pollinator-friendly spot, Martin pointed out other large grassy areas in the park that would be ideal for establishing meadow grasses and other pollinator-friendly habitats. While there is an up-front cost to establish these areas, over time the maintenance cost decreases significantly because mowing is no longer required.

South Bay

The second pollinator-friendly area is on the other side of the lake, called the South Bay near the stormwater management pond. Planted near the water along the side of a small hill with a stone bench were throngs of black-eyed susans, purple coneflower and bee balm that were flourishing in a blaze of color. This area had been planned and planted as an Eagle Scout project.

The group shared many ideas about how Greenbelt could become even more friendly to pollinators and wildlife in general. These included educational signage at the lake, collecting wildflower seeds for free in public areas and the establishment of a wildlife corridor. Such a corridor would be beneficial both to insects and mammals as it helps them move safely to wider areas in search of food.

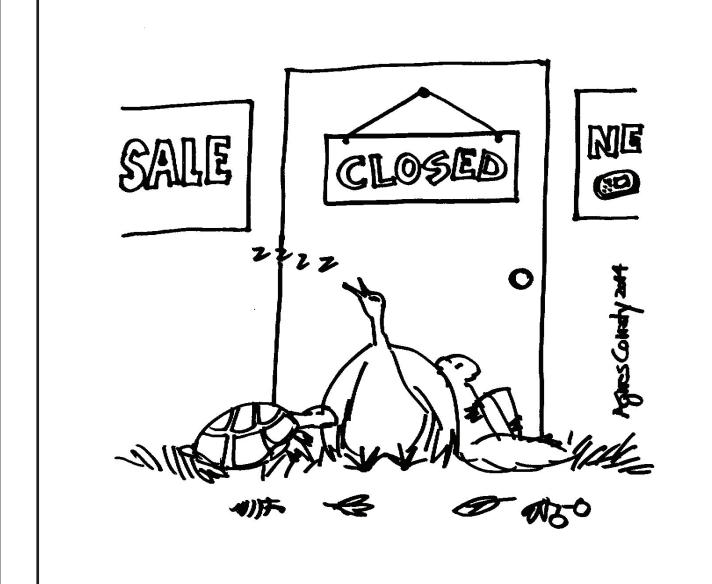

The Butterfly Brigade has heard from many concerned gardeners and homeowners who are interested in planting more bee- and pollinator-friendly plants, as the collapse of honeybee colonies in the U.S. has been increasingly in the news. Much is at risk, as it is estimated that nearly one-third of all food produced in the U.S. is pollinated by bees.

Some local nurseries have taken up the cause by increasing their offerings of pollinator-friendly plants and discontinuing use of a class of pesticides called neonicotinoids that have been linked to the honeybee colony collapse.

Lemonade Sale Benefits Animals

This Labor Day, the city's animal shelter received an unexpected donation. Nine-year old Haley Rose Moore sold lemonade this summer to raise money for the shelter and earned $100.

Her mother matched the earnings and Planning Director Celia Craze offered an equal match, with Haley's efforts resulting in a $300 donation to the shelter.

One person can and did make a difference. Great job, Haley!

Toastmasters To Meet Sept. 17

The next meeting of the Greenbelt Toastmasters Club will be on Wednesday, September 17 at 7:30 p.m., in the Social Hall of Greenbelt Community Church at Hillside and Crescent Roads.

The group offers professionals, students, stay-at-home parents and retirees a supportive environment to improve skills in communication and leadership. Members learn to lose the fear of public speaking and how to become better listeners.

Obituaries

Harvey Geller

Harvey Geller, a longtime Greenbelt resident, died on August 31, 2014, at the age of 93. Mr. Geller was born in the Bronx, N.Y., on July 6, 1921, and though he most recently resided in Rockville, he lived on Northway for 57 years. He attended Brooklyn College where he was captain of the cross-country team. There he met his wife, Helen. During World War II, Mr. Geller served in Patton's Third Army, where he fought in Normandy and participated in the Battle of the Bulge. Just 12 days after his discharge on Christmas Day 1945, Helen and Harvey Geller were married. They were married for 65 years, until her death in 2011.

After the war, Mr. Geller did graduate work in economics at New York University. When he was hired in 1949 by the D.C. Health Department to establish and head up a statistical section for cancer research, he moved his young family to Maryland. Three years later he took a job with the U.S. Public Health Service in the Cancer Control Program.

During his tenure there Mr. Geller created the "Probability Tables of Death from Specific Causes." These groundbreaking tables predicted the probability of death from the top 15 causes for groups based on age, sex and race. These tables became known as The Geller Tables. Over the years they have been updated and modified to be used in prospective medicine and as actuarial tables.

Mr. Geller's other professional achievements include statistical analyses to support the use of mammography to improve breast cancer survival rates and to document the link between smoking and lung cancer. Before his retirement in 1980, Mr. Geller was chief of the Special Cancer Survey Section of the National Cancer Institute at NIH.

In 1957 Mr. Geller and his growing family moved to Northway in Greenbelt. He became active in community life, serving on the board of Twin Pines Savings and Loan Association, running for city council and participating on many committees.

A lifetime athlete, Mr. Geller could often be seen running or riding his bicycle through the streets of Greenbelt or swimming at the pool. At age 60, he began competing in the Maryland and U.S. Senior Olympics, winning over 100 medals in cycling, running and race walking. In his 80's, he joined the Terrapin Masters Swim Team and in 2006, he was inducted into the Maryland Senior Olympics Hall of Fame.

Mr. Geller maintained an active mind and thirst for learning. After retiring at the age of 59, he participated in the University of Maryland's Golden Age Program, taking courses in a wide area of topics. He also enjoyed travel. He and Mrs. Geller visited 48 of the 50 United States in their recreational vehicle. He also participated in many Roads Scholar trips and seminars.

Mr. Geller is survived by his daughters Elise (Al) Hampson, Barbara (Ron) Lambert and Holly (Bill) Hay; grandchildren Andrew Hampson, Ben and Matthew Lambert and Billy, Kristin and Brett Hay; and great-grandson Remy Lambert. A memorial service is being planned.

Marsha Susan Parker

Marsha Susan Parker's life ended on August 13, 2014, at home in Sonoma, Calif. She was 68.

She lived in Northern California since 1975, first in San Francisco and ending in Sonoma.

Ms. Parker was known for her wit and irreverent sense of humor. She had a lifelong passion for modern art and dance and she loved to sew and knit.

Prince George's Philharmonic Leader Named from ERHS

The Prince George's Philharmonic will begin its 2014-2015 season with a special concert commemorating the bicentennial of the War of 1812 and a new concertmaster. Dr. David Yarbrough is taking the helm after more than 10 years as the orchestra conductor and string specialist at Eleanor Roosevelt High School in Greenbelt. He is joining an orchestra that is known for its work with young music students.

The concertmaster is critical in shaping the sound and texture of the orchestra. In addition to Yarbrough's bachelor and master of music degrees, he holds a doctor of musical arts degree in violin performance from the Peabody Institute of Music in Baltimore.

Every summer since 1992 he has taught and performed at the Eastern Music Festival in Greensboro, N.C. He has also performed with the Baltimore Symphony, the Atlanta Symphony, the Annapolis Chamber Orchestra, the Annapolis Opera Company and as concertmaster with the Municipal Opera Company of Baltimore.

"I am honored to have been

chosen as the Prince George's Philharmonic's concertmaster," he said, "and I look forward to a great season of music".

For more information on the Prince George's Philharmonic and its bicentennial of the War of 1812 opening concert on October 11, visit pgphilharmonic.org or call 301-446-3245. There is a charge for adult tickets but those 18 and under are admitted free.

Life sometimes places us in difficult or painful situations.

How are we to respond? Perhaps the most valuable lesson is that these situations will teach us something about the world and ourselves, will transform us into something new.

ALL ARE WELCOME.

Condolences to the family and friends of Harvey Geller who died recently at the age of 93.

Sympathy also to the family and friends of Marsha Parker who died in California at the age of 68.

Congratulations to:

— Semifinalist for the 2015 National Merit Scholarship Program: Charles Bond, Ivie Ebhoidye, Kristen Ramsey and Brenda Zhang.

— David and Danielle Wolf, now of Houston, Texas, on the birth of their first baby, Calder Glasgow Wolf, on August 16, 2014. David grew up in Greenbelt and is the son of News Review staffer Liz Eny and Glenn Wolf of Lakeside Drive. The baby's maternal grandparents, Jan and Andrew Glasgow of Victor, N.Y., are excited, too.

— Our mailman Tony Schiavone and wife Kathleen (Kacks) had to miss the Labor Day festival this year, but for good reason. There were two big family events: Daughter Meagan Lopes gave birth to Joseph Anthony Lopes on August 29 and son Kevin Schiavone married Chris Martirone on August 30. Congratulations to all!

Star Party to Be Held Saturday Evening

Members of the public are invited to a star party Saturday evening, Sept. 13, at the City of Greenbelt Observatory, located at Northway field. In addition to the telescope in the observatory, several members will have set up their personal telescopes and binoculars for the enjoyment of all. Observing will begin as soon as it is dark enough, probably around 8:00 p.m.

You'll have a chance to say good-bye to Saturn (until next summer), with its magnificent rings, through our 14" Schmidt-Cassegrain telescope. In addition, if it's a very clear night, we may be able to use our new astronomical video camera to observe galaxies interacting with one another. ASG members will be available to answer questions.

The star party will be canceled without notice if it hopelessly cloudy. Attendees are asked to park in ball field lot, not up on the hill, unless bringing a telescope. You may want to bring insect repellent.

The document outlined eight areas in which the proposed committee could work:

1. Give voice to issues concerning diversity and inclusion when addressing those issues to the city council and city departments.

2. Work and share ideas with like committees and boards in other municipalities, county and the state in order to increase efficacy of our efforts.

3. Create Advisory Committee-sponsored events that promote diversity and inclusion in Greenbelt.

4. Work closely with other city advisory committees and boards in order to have greater implementation of the principles of diversity and inclusion in their programs, activities and deliberations.

5. Bring disparate constituencies together with a common goal to move the city forward along the path of uniting as one community with many facets.

6. Serve as a communication pathway to tie our city together, similar to our desire to create bikeways, pathways, under and overpasses throughout the city so that each of our three "neighborhoods" can be tied together.

7. Act independently to bring up issues to the city council and the city manager from residents and businesses of Greenbelt, as well as from city employees.

8. Represent and reflect the diverse demographics of the city in terms of ethnicity, disability, sexual orientation and gender.

Discussion

Council discussion on the topic was broad and varied. Davis noted that the city experiences a very low turnover of employees because of its relative small size and the range of benefits for employees, which tends to result in few employees leaving its employ. She also noted the efforts of the police department in achieving a better balance regarding a more diverse complement of employees.

Councilmember Silke Pope queried City Manager Michael McLaughlin regarding the city's employment process. He said the city broadcasts widely for available positions and that the budget reflects changes in diversity. He recognized, he said, that current figures are not a reflection of the Greenbelt community but that we are making progress. The city still strives to select the best candidate for the vacant position, he said.

Putens wondered if a staff advisory body could be formed. Such a body could advise the city manager on the inclusion and diversity issues raised in the Hartman request. McLaughlin said that such a body was included in the Organizational Assessment recently performed for the city.

Other council discussion related to the potential overlap of the proposed Advisory Board on Inclusion and Diversity to the existing Community Relations Advisory Board (CRAB). Some noted, however that CRAB only meets when called upon by council to address a particular issue.

Some felt that CRAB should actually meet regularly and that it could be reconstituted to address broader issues. Other members of the audience suggested that council "get rid of CRAB." There seemed to be agreement, however, that the Hartman proposal be referred to CRAB.

Code of Conduct

The last item was continued review of a working draft of a proposed Code of Conduct that council has been editing over the past several weeks. A copy of the most recent draft was attached to the worksession agenda. It appeared to reflect recent changes by Davis, Jordan and Mach.

Council continued to fine tune the language and will likely review another clean draft following the worksession. The intent is to have the Code of Conduct on a single page and be incorporated into the city's existing document, "Policies and Procedures of Greenbelt Advisory Boards and Committees."

Bill Orleans in the audience asked if notice of the worksession had been provided to members of the city's boards and committees. The response was that no such notice had been provided. (While notice of a worksession had been advertised, the topic of the meeting was changed too late for inclusion in the News Review prior to the meeting.)

The basic elements of guidance in the draft are as follows:

- Individual advisory board and committee members and the collective group will conduct their meeting in a fair, impartial and respectful manner. They will perform their duties in a professional manner. Members must not harass, insult, threaten or discriminate against their colleagues, city council, staff or members of the public.
- Members are to promote confidence in the integrity of the City of Greenbelt and always act in the public interest and not in their private interest. Members should protect the reputation of their board or committee, its members, city council and staff. They should not engage in any activity that would bring the board or committee into disrepute.
- The members will respect the limitations of their individual and collective authority. The role of the Advisory Board or Committee is to advise the city council.
- Members will strive to respect and appreciate differences in approach and point of view, whether from their colleagues, council, staff or members of the public.
- Each member will participate in the group's discussions and work assignments without dominating the discussion or activity of the group.

• The board or committee chair will insure that all members have a fair, balanced and respectful opportunity to share their knowledge and perspectives.

• The board or committee will attempt to reach consensus on issues. If consensus is not possible, strong differing opinions, such as minority opinions should be recorded and acknowledged in the report to council.

• The unanimous agreement of the board or committee must be obtained prior to the release of personal member information obtained through the advisory board or committee membership. (Note: This element specifically addresses the issue raised in Snyder's request to council.)

• Members communicating in public on board or committee business must clarify that he/she is not speaking on behalf of the board or committee or the city, but as an individual, unless authorized to do so by the board or committee.

• The board or committee (can) (will) recommend removal of any member who misses, without being excused by the majority of the board or committee, (two) (three) consecutive meetings or more than 25 percent of the regular meetings during any calendar year. The chair of the board or committee will maintain accurate attendance records.

The draft document may change based upon council review.

Masquerade: Offers Trauma Leavened with Some Insight

by Jim Link

All of us have been touched, even devastated, by the suicide of a relative or loved one.

Help in understanding and coping with this social/spiritual blight in Prince George's County has been offered since 1970 by Community Crisis Services, Inc. in the form of suicide prevention hotlines.

Now the Charis Center for the Arts in Bowie is offering more help in the form of Bill Leary's searing, enlightening new play, Masquerade. This gripping production depicts "one family's story of suicide" as it grapples with "unanswerable questions, unbearable loss" in the aftermath of son Kevin's self-destruction.

The excellent excerpt I saw showed the initial reactions of five family members and a clergywoman (six monologues) - denial, anger, confusion, numbness. They dropped their masks for the rest of the play as Leary's scalpel peeled away their secrets, their rationalizations, the "masquerade" they had been living.

The opening monologues are wrenching; the ending is cathartic, I strongly suspect.

Kevin's sister Kelli (Sarah K. Scott) condemns him: "You've left us here to deal with this s---t!"

Mother Janet (Lauren Giglio)

moans, "Children can cut your heart out without a word. What the hell do I do from here?"

Father Steven (Tim Jansen) resents being judged harshly by the rest of the family. "I need answers, dammit! Are you there [God]?"

Pastor Diana's (Kelly Richards) faith is shaken. "I don't know what I believe anymore. Is God really listening?"

Adopted brother Kyle (Alie Kamara) wonders, "I thought I knew you. Maybe we should have listened more . . . it's time we stopped lying."

Carol V. Calhoun (grandmother Emma), a grandmother herself, feels a special connection to her character.

A welcome bonus is the Q and A session after every performance. The whole cast and director/author Leary fielded questions and entertained comments from audience members.

Judy Goldberg-Strassler, a former elementary school counselor and current crisis hotline volunteer; a bereavement counselor at Chesapeake Life Center, part of the Hospice of Chesapeake; and others gave trenchant insights.

Dr. Anna Hadley, founder and director of the Charis Center for the Arts described its reading, acting, crafts and literacy programs. She claimed that Bill Leary's newly-founded residential Wolfpack Theater Company "gives us an enormous advantage in addition to what we already do. All children are gifted; we just need to discover their gifts," she said.

Tim Jansen, a counselor who trains crisis hotline volunteers, emphasized that "counselors need to listen; newcomers often think it's easy." His eyeball roll evoked laughter.

Masquerade is playing Sept 19, 20, 21, 25, 26 and 27 at 8 p.m. at 13010 8th Street in Old Bowie. For reservations call 240-271-5471 or email dean912@live.com.

I'm ready for the catharsis of the complete play. Are you?

Fall Season Begins for Soccer Teams

by David Whiteman

The fall soccer season for Greenbelt's two travel soccer teams playing in the Baltimore Beltway Soccer League (bbsl.org) began on Saturday, September 6 at Mandan Field in Greenbelt. Playing back-to-back games, the Greenbelt Soccer Alliance U14 boys Pioneers scored an impressive 5 to 1 victory in the first game over the visiting Peninsula Soccer Club Chuda. In the second game the Greenbelt SA U13 girls Lightning played a very close game against the Stampede from one of the largest soccer clubs in Maryland, Arundel Soccer Association, but lost 2 to 1 on a controversial goal in the last minute of the game. Both sets of visitors were well-pleased with the conditions at Mandan Field, which had been nicely lined by the City of Greenbelt and had new goals purchased last year by Greenbelt SA.

The U14 boys Pioneers were named to acknowledge Greenbelt's first travel soccer team that formed in 2013 under the management of Neil McConlogue. This season the team welcomes new head coach Fabrice Mukoko, who holds the Maryland State Youth Soccer Association "E" license and also coaches with DC United. The Lightning moved up to travel soccer just this season, having won Division 1 in the Anne Arundel County select recreational league in Spring 2014. The Lightning is coached by David Whiteman, who holds U.S. Soccer Federation National Youth and MSYSA D licenses.

Future Games

The Greenbelt teams have three other back-to-back games scheduled later this season: September 20 at Mandan Field and October 4 and 25 at Heurich Park in Hyattsville. Heurich Park offers a full stadium environment with an artificial turf field and lights providing an exciting venue for the teams.

The Lightning have an additional game at Mandan Field on November 8. Greenbelt soccer fans are encouraged to come and support Greenbelt's travel teams at Mandan Field and Heurich Park in Hyattsville. The full schedule of games and the results for both teams are available at bbsl.org and at individual team pages at greenbeltsoccer.org/team-pages.html.

Greenbelt SA also supports teams at the select recreational level in the Anne Arundel Youth Soccer league and pure recreational level in the Prince Georges Soccer, Inc. (PGSI) league in Hyattsville. PGSI offers divisions for players in school grades K-6. With formats ranging from four-person teams to six-person teams depending on age, play in PGSI is on small fields with small teams, as recommended by the USSF, to give the younger players increased ball interaction time, which helps to build skills in controlling the ball.

The first games for all teams in PGSI are on Saturday, September 13 at the Magruder/Melrose Park complex in Hyattsville.

Gallery Sculpture, Photography Show

Two artists featured in a new exhibition at the Community Center Art Gallery share impressions of their own unique explorations of the environment and its formal beauty. David Purcell creates elegant sculptures of rock formations and insect hives out of carefully cut and stacked layers of corrugated cardboard. Peter Stern creates aerial photography, shooting from his ultralight plane; the photos now on view explore the winding waterways and the golden landscape tapestry of Maryland's Eastern Shore in autumn.

Purcell brings to his sculptural practice the skills of a trained architectural model maker. This experience, he notes, "introduced me to the rational analysis of landscape forms. Architecture is often quite dissonant with the landscape and while being critical of this, I also suggest futuristic/optimistic solutions. I explore these landscapes, real and imaginary and our relationship to them through the lens of architectural language, imagining a hopeful future."

Purcell's work is completed not by the artist's hand, but by the viewer's mind. He engages the viewer's ability to see a collection of parts and mentally resolve them into a singular whole. "My work investigates the boundaries of this principle," he writes, "asking when and why the collective pieces become something more than the sum of the parts, and creating a tension that moves back and forth between being a whole and being a collection." At the level of a household, a neighborhood or a nation, we are all familiar with this tension and with its beautiful resolution in the creation of our own hives.

In Stern's work, the details of the landscape and its bountiful flora and fauna are resolved into a more abstract visual composition through the lens of his camera, high above the scene. Stern has been flying since 2003, becoming a light sport pilot in 2007. His aerial photography has increasingly engaged with environmental stewardship issues in the Mid-Atlantic region, including coal mining and deforestation.

Most of the images featured in this show were taken during a three-day journey down the eastern shore of the Chesapeake Bay in October 2012, "flying alone... over the haunting serenity of the marshlands and forests, seeking out the spiritual and artistic beauty in the landscapes below, both pristine and altered by the hand of man." Stern finds resonance between his experience and the story described in James Michener's Chesapeake: young Pentaquod journeying from his home amongst a warrioring Susquahannock tribe, paddling alone down the river to eventually settle with the peaceful Choptank, or 'Tshapetank' peoples near what is now Cambridge.

Slice: Sculpture by David Purcell and Aerial Photography by Peter Stern will be on view through October 17. Gallery hours are Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. and Sunday, 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., whenever the space is not reserved for special use. Guests of all ages are invited to attend a reception with the artists from 1:30 p.m. to 3 p.m. on Sunday, October 5, part of an Artful Afternoon that will also include a craft workshop, folk music concert and more. Consuella Harris Publishes The Surrogates

by Valerie Young

Consuella Harris

Retirement has never been so sweet for Consuella Harris, 67, as she plays with her dog Princess whom she calls her "constant companion and best friend."

Harris said she believes in "following one's dreams" and that is exactly what she has accomplished four years after retiring as a human resources officer for the City of Greenbelt.

Since the 1980s, when a show about surrogate parenting piqued Harris' interest, she began the long process of researching a book about surrogacy.

Over the last 34 years Harris put her dream of writing a book aside to take care of work and family.

However on June 18, after a little nudging from her daughter and sending over a hundred inquiry letters to agents and publishers, Harris published her first book called The Surrogates. On September 14, from 2 to 4 p.m. she will do a book signing at the Greenbelt Community Center, first floor.

"I've always admired my mother because if she sets her mind to do something she's going to do it and she needed a little push to finish the book and I think I provided some of that," said Stephanie Janifer, Harris's daughter.

In The Surrogates an investigator searches for the murderer of two businessmen who initially were believed to have died of heart attacks. The murders have a connection to the Lake Shore Parenting Group, a surrogacy-parenting group. The story focuses on three women who were surrogate mothers. In this mystery there are twists and turns as the investigator unravels the motives of the murderer. The book delves into the lives of the children and families that were affected by the secret kept by these surrogate mothers.

"Surrogate parenting is becoming a new wave of alternatives to parenting and I see my book as being a non-judgmental way to just take a look at what could happen," said Harris.

For women with infertility problems, surrogacy is an alternative treatment where another woman will carry a child to term. According to a 2010 Council for Responsible Genetics report called "Surrogacy in America," gestational surrogacy is the most common. Gestational surrogacy involves using the woman's egg and her partner's sperm to create an embryo. The embryo is then implanted into the gestational surrogate carrier through in-vitro fertilization. Traditional surrogacy is when a woman agrees to become pregnant using the man's sperm and her own egg. The child will be genetically related to the surrogate and the male partner. This method would be used if the woman had no eggs or unhealthy eggs. However, if the woman has eggs, but no uterus or has a serious health condition, she may be able to use a gestational surrogate carrier.

According to the report, Surrogacy in America, there are few statistics on the number of women and families involved in the surrogacy market and more research should be done to understand the scope and implications of surrogacy.

"I did a lot of research and once I started writing the book it took on a life of its own," said Harris.

Harris has been writing for over 40 years. She started out writing a play called I am Somebody, that received the Bicentennial Award for Black History and was produced by the Prince George's County College Readers' Theatre. She also wrote a comedy based on the show Amos 'n' Andy that hasn't yet been produced.

"I am hoping that this book is an inspiration to senior citizens," said Harris. "That 60s or retirement does not mean that life is over. It means an opportunity for new challenges and doing some of the things we always said we wanted to do."

Harris has other plans for her retirement. One of her other dreams is to learn how to play the piano and take a trip flying first class. She also plans to write more books in the future. She is currently working on an autobiographical book.

She is currently on the Ethics Committee for the City of Greenbelt.

Harris is originally from Southeast Washington, D.C. She went to high school at Eastern High School and graduated in 1964. However, Harris has been a Greenbelt resident for 36 years and raised her daughter in Greenbelt. She said she loves the "small town effect." She reminisced about walking with her daughter to the library and the park.

Spending time with her five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren will be something that Harris will focus on during her retirement. She has a third great-grandchild on the way.

Her daughter said she really enjoyed her mother's new book.

"Just when I thought I had it figured out, there was a nice twist," said Janifer.

Valerie Young is a journalism student at the University of Maryland writing for the News Review.
